

1962-63

AT

ST. PROCOPIUS COLLEGE

LISLE, ILLINOIS

Dedication

THE REVEREND EDMUND J. JURICA, O.S.B., Ph.D. Distinguished Educator of the year, 1963.

A yearbook is a historical record of events in the lives of the People included herein. It is even more than this; it is a record Of memories and impressions as well. One of the most lasting Impressions of our stay at S.P.C. is that of Rev. Edmund Jurica, O.S.B. Fr. Edmund graduated from S.P.C. in 1919, and took his doctoral Work at the University of Chicago, graduating with a Ph.D. in Physiology in 1926. He then returned to S.P.C. and organized the Zoology Department with special emphasis on pre-medical studies. As the major instructor in the field of Biological science, his Classroom load is tremendous. Even his many extracurricular Activities, fellowships in various Biological organizations, Birdbanding activities, observatory studies, and others, have not Kept Fr. Edmund from his students when they needed him most. No Student has ever been turned away; none ever will be. Be it in or out of the classroom, he is a most inspiring man. To Those of us who have been fortunate enough to have him as a teacher, He has proven himself par excellence. It is in this spirit, then, that we respectfully and thankfully Dedicate this 1963 edition of the SPC to one of the truest and Humblest pedagogues we know— The Reverend Edmund J. Jurica, O.S.B., Ph.D.

VERY REV. HILARY S. JURICA, O.S.B. and REV. EDMUND J. JURICA, O.S.B.

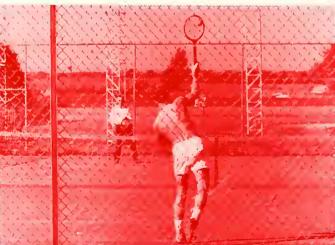

Fresh September. A month of orientation and Registration. Didactic, Informative lectures in Uncomfortably crowded rooms. Hollow tennis balls on the courts. Scattered frosh on the sun-laden Softball diamond. In the dormitory, Chess, cards, bull-sessions, Casual, but purposeful-merely Seeking to formulate friendships. The sudden unveiling of a spacious Campus. A different campus. Not of bicycles and unions, Traditions or frat houses, But of gravel roads and seasoned Buildings of red brick. A country freshness and a spirit of Closeness.

A college diminutive in size, But impressive in potential.

It is growing, expanding. The life is novel, and the freshman Must adjust. This is the essence of Orientation Week. It will begin their adjustment. Thursday, September 6th. Registration. For the novices, mere tedium And frustration, nervousness And impatience. For the veterans, Friendly, familiar faces, Hurried synopses of summer vacations In the corridors, New courses, new outlooks. Room to room, Long line to long line, Signature to signature, And, finally, the unbelievable crowd in The non-profit bookstore— Long on lines, but short on books. Even longer cafeteria lines.

But these are all the pains of Growth, and St. Procopius College Is growing, enlarging, expanding. Night falls, and the bulk of Registration has been completed. Stragglers will clutter the Deans' offices for weeks to come, But most can prepare for and Ponder over their courses. The school year of 1962-63 has begun. Sunday night and Hell Week. A fever of anticipated amusement Grips the campus. Thunderous shouts and the stampede Begins. The bewildered Freshmen are herded by belligerent Marshals Out of the serenity of Jaeger, Onto a dark road, Into a hostile gym. Here await the Hell Court and The Judge, as well as the Rabble in the balcony. Dawn breaks. Monday morning.

Freshmen. Donned in both bibs and beanies, Prancing to and fro, Outwardly demonstrating their Benevolence by holding hands And hurling lavish praises And incredulous flattery At the unsuspecting upperclassmen. The week progresses. Humorous hellcourts and some Short tempers. But when Hell Week ends, the Purpose has been achieved. A humbling, a disciplining, A unifying. This is Hell Week, it's essence. September surges onward. The emphasis shifts. New subject matter to be digested, Lengthy, painful homework to Be ground out, Enigmatic tests to be solved. Clubs begin their membership Drives; the football team its Preseason drills.

A return to the serenity of the chapel. The upstart of the social season. New faces on the faculty. And before all has settled, September has vanished. October enters. Following a homegoing weekend And a football game, Faculty Day comes on the 9th. The grounds are slippery and soggy From rain, but, gradually, students Appear to grapple for Honors in the individual events. The class teams play cutthroat in Team events. And when the scene has quieted, And the broken bones cleared away, The victorious class wins $50, And the victorious baseball team Receives the much-anticipated Privilege of matching talents With a team of faculty members.

Whether from cowardice or Prudence, the faculty team fails To appear. But the plentiful refreshments And weary limbs fill the void. The remainder of the week Is spent guarding the bonfire Against the sadistic efforts Of the local arsonists, With the frosh providing the All-night vigils. Columbus Day. The lighting of the bonfire, Fireworks, and the Pep Rally. And those who braved the Chilly, windy weather were Rewarded with the once-a-year Warmth of the bonfire, as well As the warmth of expected Victory against Milton. The momentary splendor of the Fireworks, the spirited Cheers and talks, And soon it was over.

Saturday was sunny. The game was brutal and Unrelenting, and the defeat Was disheartening. But once the bitter flame of Defeat has been extinguished, The dorms and campus come alive With excitement as all await The dance. Neither celebrations nor the Clamor for waiters were too Hampered by defeat. The 22nd brings President Kennedy's speech and the Cuba crisis. Predictions and prayers Take hold of a suddenly-changed Campus. A fearful hush and a Certain hope dominate for a Week. And when the alarm is over, Normality returns, and Last-minute preparations are Made for the fall play, The Caine Mutiny.

The student participants devote Long hours and tiring effort, But the eventual satisfaction And helpful experience are Rewarding.

The turnout is good; the play a Success.

And in between the occasional Highlights, the drudgery of Studies continue.

For the freshmen, habits and Patterns, both in study and Otherwise, begin to take Shape.

Trucks and machinery invade the Campus, as digging begins for The new library.
A mild tremor in S.G. about

The Young Democrats.

Mid-semester exams

Await the unsuspecting,

And October ends.

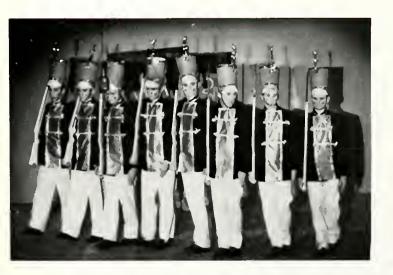

November appears. Most eyes are cast ahead to Thanksgiving recess. The final football game of The season against Concordia. Dad's Day-proud fathers Share the bench, as well as Every tackle, with their sons. For the seniors, the 20th Means submitting the first Draft of the thesis. On the social scene, Mixers and the presentation Of the Christmas Musical by The SPC Productions provide The entertainment. In the gym, The pounding of basketballs, The shuffling of feet, The working of plays-All announce the basketball Season. The team faces a formidable Schedule, but predictions are Favorable.

With turkey consumed, Students return from a short Thanksgiving recess with Resolutions, expecting to get So much done before Christmas. And as they begin, November comes to a chilly close. Short, but eventful, December makes its debut. Foundation work on the library Rapidly continues. The basketball team opens at Spring Arbor in victorious Fashion, unveiling a new Ball-control type of offense. Three more basketball games, Two mixers, and on the 14th, The Christmas Dance at Elmhurts American Legion. Crowded but enjoyable, The dance opens the Christmas Holiday in fine fashion.

The S.G. Christmas Party follows On Monday with Tedious bingo, Jeered winners, Fine prizes, And, finally, Santa Claus (Or some unreasonable facsimile) With his meaningful packages For unsuspecting students. Many laughs; food served. And then it's all over. The basketball team annihilates Shimer, and then the Christmas Vacation begins. And while students celebrate On New Year's Eve, December Disappears unnoticed. January comes, and with it the Terror of semester exams, Things which many students Use Christmas vacation to Forget about. The hockey team surprises with A short winning streak.

Semester exams beckon; The students, with an anxious Eye already to semester break, Come. The annual retreat follows. Exams over, the students have an Opportunity To rest and cast an eye inward. A chance to do some thinking, Some resolving. A time of thought and quiet. And after this, The postponement of the Letterman's Club Dance And registration for second Semester. Semester break-a week of Relaxation. Then back to the grind. January leaves. The school year is now Half-completed.

The months seem to disappear More quickly, and February is No exception.

A month consisting chiefly of Basketball games, mixers, and Valentines.

The students await the coming of Lent. Class officers prepare for Their respective class parties. A welcome change in the school's Mass policy.

Ash Wednesday on the 27th, And insignificant February is Gone.

The Lion enters and with it the Persistent wind, cold, and snow Of winter.

Lent is here.

Aside from the trip to Nazereth, Activity approaches a standstill. Emphasis now shifts to inside The dorms.

The weekends become barren for Most.

Those who stay split their Time between Chem Lab, Riley's, Card games, And general fooling around. The three C's-Coke, Candy, and Cigarettes, Strengthen their control on Student funds. The letter and the telephone, Dominant factors in the College lives of many students, Bear a heavier burden of Communication. Those who return home for Weekends find their release On a date, A night out with the guys, Or even an evening of Television.

But during the week, the Pattern continues undisturbed, With the exception of Regular and quarter exams. The work on the library drives Ahead. March departs. April enters. The spirit of Lent rises As Easter approaches. Easter recess, and Activity hums once again. The spring play, The Music Man, Track. Baseball, and Golf, Dominate interest until April exits. May means the Spring Dance at St. Andrews Country Club, Final exams, and the Relieving end of a long School year. For some it's been a first; For some, a final. But for all, One not to be forgotten.

FRESHMAN

Learning fast. High school was fun, But a more Serious path Lies ahead. Education. Manhood. Responsibility. These he must secure, or His college years are In vain. Many acquaintances. Changing ideas. A certain seriousness. He is on his way. The freshman.

To tell a story,
And to tell it well—
This is the purpose
Of a yearbook.
This story has been of
The school year, 1962-63,
At St. Procopius College.
Regardless of whether
It has been told well,
It cannot be told again.
For next year,
The story changes.
